CRAIG DEMMIN

BILLY ANDRACKI

BILL SEDGEWICK

SCOTT SCHWEITZER

By Eric Trendel

The last time the Rochester Raging Rhinos didn't open the regular season as a defending champion the year was 1998. Coming off a disappointing season in 1997, Rochester re-tooled its lineup, adding youth, experience and a hunger to be the best. That year the Rhinos went on to capture the first of three A-League titles in a four-year span that also saw them claim the highest honor in United States Soccer – the 1999 U.S. Open Cup.

While a Northeast Division crown and a trip to the Eastern Conference Finals in 2002 can hardly be called disappointing, it was the first time in five years the Rhinos didn't play in the finals. So this past off-season, Rhinos General Manager Chris Economides and the coaching staff of Pat Ercoli, Frank Odoi and Francisco Escos did what they do best – try to build a champion.

In goal for the Rhinos in 2002 is an "original Rhino" and fan favorite Billy Andracki. The veteran Andracki enters the season as the Rhinos all-time leader in saves and U.S. Open Cup wins. He also ranks in the franchise's top 10 in career games played and minutes played. Also competing for playing time in camp is Davidson College grad Soren Johnson and a veteran of Peru's first division, Rafael Quesada.

In the back this season are two players that have dominated the scene in Rochester for the past half-decade. Two-time A-League Defender of the Year, Scott Schweitzer, and three-time Rhinos Most Valuable Player Craig Demmin, return to lead a defensive unit that has finished no lower than second in each of the last five seasons in goals allowed. Joining them is the gritty Bill Sedgewick and youngsters Ryan DiNunzio and Carlos Mendes. Sedgewick, entering his fifth season in a Rhinos uniform, is just nine games away from becoming just the eighth player in team history to reach the 100 games played mark.

Looking at the Rhinos midfield, one would have to agree that it is the strongest unit for Rochester this season. Returning to the fold to lead this group is one of the most popular players in Rochester sports history – Lenin Steenkamp. In addition to his role on the field, the native of South Africa will take on a new role in the Rhinos organization – assistant coach.

Also in the providing leadership is Bulgarian Stojan Mladenov. Already eighth on Rochester's career points list, Mladenov looks to help provide a boost to the season's offense with his crafty footwork and deadly crosses. Rounding out the middle are second-year Rhinos Tainor Suarez and Yuri Lavrinenko and newly acquired David Hayes. Suarez led the A-League in assists just two years ago and his precise ball skills will be counted on to help lead the Rochester attack. Lavrinenko, a graduate of Gates Chili High School in Rochester, came on last season to earn a starting role. His continued improvement will give Rochester some flexibility this season. Hayes, acquired in an off-season trade with Richmond, brings speed to the lineup and should see action on the outside. Expect to see plenty from newcomers Maurizio Rocha and Fred Commodore this season as well.

Rochester will have plenty of speed up top in 2003. Returning to the lineup are two familiar faces to Rhinos fans, Doug Miller and Jaimel Mitchell. Miller, the Rhinos' all-time leader in career points and goals, should spark the same excitement that made him one of the most celebrated players in team history. Mitchell, who spent the 2001 season in a Rhinos uniform, is back after making Atlanta his home last season as a member of the Silverbacks. Third-year Rhino Kirk Wilson brings his tenacious play back to Frontier Field. He will provide Coach Ercoli with multiple options with his ability to play forward or in the midfield. Viktor Peco will also look to contribute in his first season in the green and gold.

Even with some new faces in the Rochester lineup this season, but there is little doubt that Rochester will expect the same winning style of play they have seen in the past. And with a blend of veteran experience and youthful enthusiasm, Frontier Field should once again be rocking with championship excitement this summer.

How Important Is Exercise?

THE FLORIAN HEALTH APPROACH

In the good old days, people got plenty of exercise. Our ancient ancestors hunted animals for food, fought to edible plants and hunted everything they did from the own physical ability. They need to know about how they can squeeze in some exercise. Their days were filled with physical activities. Even our great-grandfathers, who were much older than most of us, had a job that was full of activity, including the work in the fields and on the farm.

Our bodies function best when we participate in regular activity. And we are grateful for our cars, washing machines and modern conveniences. Modern life has made it so easy for us to get by without having to move. For most people, the only way to get a little exercise is to go to the gym. But exercise can't be done every day. We must create opportunities to be active, such as attending an exercise class, playing sports or going to a dance. And these opportunities often compete with other important priorities in our lives. Life gets busy, it's hard to find time to put an exercise program on hold.

HOW IMPORTANT IS EXERCISE?

We might begin to answer this question by asking how important is it to be healthy? When health problems arise, we often feel a sense of responsibility. By being healthy, we can avoid many of the health problems that can arise. As a parent, we are often told that the importance of health is not a separate issue from the importance of other priorities in life.

Regular physical activity has many benefits for the body. It helps to reduce the risk of many chronic diseases such as heart disease, high blood pressure, high cholesterol and type 2 diabetes. It also helps to improve mental health and helps to reduce stress. The use of physical activity to improve health is a well-known fact. In fact, those who exercise regularly are less likely to be hospitalized or die from a heart attack. Those who exercise regularly are also less likely to be hospitalized or die from a heart attack.

Because of the many benefits of exercise, it is important to make sure that you are getting enough exercise. The American Heart Association recommends that you get at least 150 minutes of moderate-intensity exercise each week. This can be broken down into 30 minutes a day, five days a week. If you are unable to do this, then you should aim for at least 75 minutes of vigorous-intensity exercise each week.

Activities are becoming more and more sedentary. For example, many people now use cars to get to work, and many people now use elevators to get to their offices. This means that many people are not getting enough exercise. In fact, many people are not getting enough exercise to maintain good health. This is a problem because many people are not getting enough exercise to maintain good health. This is a problem because many people are not getting enough exercise to maintain good health. Many people are exercising to lose weight and become more fit. However, when it comes to weight loss, exercise is not the only answer. Even if you lose weight, you may still experience health problems. A healthy diet and regular exercise are the best way to maintain good health. Lenin Steenkamp

By Eric Trendel

RHINOS MIDFIELDER LENIN STEENKAMP didn't have to experience life for very long before deciding what he wanted to do for a living. Growing up in Durban, South Africa, a youthful Steenkamp remembers going to watch his father play soccer and knew right then where his desires lied.

Living in a country where soccer is the national sport, Steenkamp was always around the game. The excitement and enthusiasm that he approaches the game with is something that has endeared him to the fans of Rochester. Fans that look upon the sport much like he does with passion.

Steenkamp knew that he found a special place to play the game he loved from the first minute heaced up his boots in Rochester. "My first home game as a Rhino was the first game at Frontier Field," said Steenkamp. "Dougie Niner scored three goals, we came from behind and won 3-2. There was so much electricity and the crowd was into the game. It was amazing."

It is that feeling of excitement from the fans that made Steenkamp make Rochester his home. For an athlete to stay with one team for the majority of his career is something that has become rare these days. However, now in his eighth season wearing the green and gold, it is something that the 33-year-old looks at with pride.

"I have been very fortunate to play for an organization that makes an effort to keep its core players around. We have built something special in Rochester and to be around from the start is something that I am very proud of. So proud, in fact, that Steenkamp has turned down offers to play elsewhere and at higher levels. In 2002 the NY/NJ MetroStars of Major League Soccer made a strong bid for his services and eventually made him an offer. Fortunately for the Rhinos it wasn't one he accepted. "It is always better to stay with one team rather than be bouncing around from team to team," added Lenin.

There was another offer made to the Rhinos veteran that he would have gladly accepted. That came in 1998 when Steenkamp was just 18 years old. While training with English Premier League power Manchester United, Head Coach Alex Ferguson called him into his office one day and sat him down. "He offered me a contract with Man U, but with the political situation (apartheid) in South Africa at the time we couldn't get my VISA and work permit worked out."

After the opportunity to play with one of the world's best soccer teams didn't work out, Steenkamp eventually made his way to the A-League with the Atlanta Ruckus. After two seasons in Atlanta he was traded to the Montreal Impact who immediately sent him to Rochester in exchange for Gustavo Villagra and Gustavo Romanello. Almost immediately his hard work and dedication endeared him to Rochester's loyal supporters.

That work ethic was never more evident than after the 1999 season. On June 4, 1999 Steenkamp went to turn on a ball and was viciously taken down in a game against the Charleston Battery at Frontier Field. The tackle left him with three torn ligaments and a dislocated left knee. The boy who realized his dream of playing pro soccer now had to deal with that fact that his career might be over. The injury left Frontier Field silent. "I saw his leg and it was a scary sight," said Rhinos defender Scott Schwerzler. "My first thought was to jump on top of him so he couldn't see what it looked like. The idea that his career might be over was an option that never crossed the determined Steenkamp's mind."

"The doctors told me that I would never even be able to run again. But I made a deal with him that if they did their best to fix my knee that when I played my first game I would make sure they would be there to see it."

It wasn't long before fan mail began to pour in offering words of encouragement. After months of grueling rehab, the day finally came when he would play the game again. Less than a year after the injury, with about eight minutes remaining in a preseason game against the Toronto Lynx, Steenkampaced up his boots and a broke on his left knee and stepped onto the field for the first time in nine months. "I remember the feeling to this day. It made all the hard work and effort worth while. To be able to experience that feeling again is something that I will never forget."

Steenkamp returned to play the sport that he has devoted most of his life to in 2000, started 21 of 28 games in 2000. The next season, 2001, he won the Rhinos Most Valuable Player and Leadership awards for outstanding service. Now as the 2003 season approaches, one of the most popular players in team history is taking on a new role with the Rhinos—that of assistant coach. After four seasons as one of the team's captains, Steenkamp is excited about the opportunity. "Coaching is something that I have always wanted to do. It gives me an opportunity to give back to the game that has given so much to me."

The idea of giving back is something that is not new to Steenkamp. One of the most recognized members of the team, he can often be found after home games signing autographs for the Rhino faithful. It is his way of thanking the fans for their support through the years. "I have often said the best soccer fans are in Rochester. They provide such a warm environment and a feeling of belonging."

Scott Schweitzer

By Craig Rybczynski

ROCHESTER RAGING RHINOS DEFENDER SCOTT SCHWEITZER has many passions in his life, but you may be surprised to find out that some of them are far removed from soccer. Beyond the soccer championships and individual awards as a very complex man. There is a deeper, more spiritual side to the Rhinos' defender. His sixth season in Rochester. He has a little edge to his game and his personality. His 5-11, 150-pound frame can fool the biggest and heaviest, and so far in the A-League he admits that he could "annihilate" him as a body and punching, but the way Schweitzer defines himself and his life rests around his beliefs and right wrist.

"I stand on love, joy, compassion and equanimity," said Schweitzer about the Tibetan silver medal that hangs around his neck with a string. Also have a bracelet. Both are symbols of his life. My bracelets have Tibetan symbols for bone and spirit, which is what we are pretty much made of. It's our bones and who we are, our spirits.

It's a connection between me and my wife," added Scott, whose wife, Kristin, wears a similar necklace. A reminder of his two-year marriage and the values by which he measures his life. The couple met while he was playing indoor soccer for the Cleveland Crunch of the old National Professional Soccer League. The ship continued through his move to Rochester in the summer of 1998. That was when he signed a contract with the new team, the A-League's Rochester Raging Rhinos. Schweitzer brought with him his calmness of the game and a penchant for winning.

He had won two titles in Cleveland and didn't have to wait long to win his third. In his second season, he won the A-League's first Open Cup title in 1999.

"I like to be a guy that has been part of every championship," he said. "I like to be a guy that everyone is always trying to knock off. The champion is stupid. That's why you play sports. Or to be for only."

Schweitzer has also been recognized as a key member of those championship teams, winning four A-League First Team honors and two Defender of the Year awards. He also played for the second-place Rhinos in the season 24-4 and held opponents to a regular season A-League record low 5 goals.

"When I joined the Rhinos, we had a record for scoring and that is what everyone always talks about," he said. "But we crushed the record for goals against. It was a phenomenal defensive year."

Schweitzer has been part of a defensive force that has never finished lower than second in the A-League in goals against. Another player that has played a key role in the Rhinos' defensive success is Craig Demmin, who has a special relationship with Schweitzer.

"It's weird that we both came together because there is no other player for him or for me that complements each other as well as we do," Schweitzer said. He has his style and I have mine. It's weird how two people meet. He is from Trinidad and I'm from Rahway, NJ, and we ended up in Rochester, NY."

Demmin was Schweitzer's inspiration to play in Major League Soccer. Demmin, the Rhinos' three-time MVP, played for the Tampa Bay Mutiny in 2001. Schweitzer wanted to follow his teammate to Tampa Bay, but Demmin stayed in Rochester the following year, and the two were reunited last season as the Rhinos advanced to the league semifinals.

"We have known each other for five years, but it seems a lot longer," said Demmin. "Like his passion for the game and his passion for life."

"He is a very intelligent player and really reads the game quite well," he added.

Last season was the first time that the Rhinos did not win a championship since Schweitzer joined the team in 1998. It ended a four-year run of championships for the Rhinos. For Rochester, it was a remarkable streak, especially for Schweitzer, who gave up the family sport to play soccer.

"I have under that were minor league baseball players," he said. "That was the sport that I was really good at. My favorite sport was basketball, but I was 5-6, 5-7 and 115 pounds and you are not going to play anywhere at that height."

Basketball is the sport I love the most," said the devout New York Knicks fan. "I love to watch it and play it."

Growing up in Rahway, NJ, Schweitzer didn't start playing soccer until he was 11 years old, which is four years older than his Rhinos teammates.

"Kids start playing at 3 or 5 years old," he said. "I was 11 when I knew what soccer was. I'm in my city and there was a lot of soccer growing up. In my city, I think I was the best football player then, but I knew the guys close to me in ability. I knew those were about that was close and I know how many guys were in my own so, said, 'I am going to go with soccer.'"

Schweitzer has never forgotten his decision and still plays basketball in his free time and continues his obsession with the New York Knicks. He has memories of a basketball in his game as a youngster, on the pitch and the way he distributes the ball, passing it to a point guard. He doesn't play as well as he used to, but he said that lesson will be an aid in a tryout at age 13.

The coach said, "You know how you can tell the best player in the game? He's the one who plays out there," said Schweitzer. "I always try to keep that in my head. If you go to high school in New York, you are always for something everyday. Whether be your army or be a pro who is the top guy on the playground."

That instinct is evident each game as Schweitzer hounds opposing players and battles with a barrage of words and tackles. His tough and rugged play has earned him respect and earned him a nickname, the "wily" 99. He even got into a fight against the Rhinos' star, the "wily" (Cunningham). He now has black and white marks about the incident, but that style of play is what changed the 31-year-old in Rochester the following season.

Schweitzer, however, did not arrive empty-handed as he juggled his hat and soccer collection with him. His collection of baseball caps, which includes his hat, "wily" has grown to 120. His favorite hat is a yellow New York Yankees cap, despite his disdain for the Bronx Bombers. The hats are now boxed up, but one was prominently displayed in his apartment in Cleveland, serving as a borderline spare room. The hats have been sold away with his sneaker collection, but Schweitzer admits he is searching for another hat to add to the pile.

"I've been looking for a good Blue Jays hat," he said. "The Blue Jays have a new hat, so I probably go and pick one up and that will be my favorite hat."

Schweitzer will wear many hats during the season, from the Cincinnati Bearcats to the New York Yankees, the Diego Ducks. But the important thing is that he'll be wearing a Rhinos uniform again this year.

He is pretty confident and shows his confidence with his emotions," said Demmin. "He likes what he does and shows his passion for the game."

The Soccer Sam Show

Saturdays at 12:00 noon on WB-16

Rochester's biggest soccer promoter and fan Soccer Sam - will once again bring exciting soccer action and highlights to Rhinos fans as the Rochester Raging Rhinos present The Soccer Sam Show on WRWB WB-16 television every Saturday at 12:00 noon.

Soccer Sam's devotion to "the beautiful game" will rub off on even the casual soccer fan. You won't find a more fun way to learn about and watch the Rhinos and soccer. Soccer Sam will anchor the show weekly, but look for special guest hosts and characters to appear and lend their soccer expertise.

Rochester Raging Rhino player features will highlight the half-hour television show, with interview sessions and "up close and personal" segments with players. A weekly soccer tip feature by the coach, players and training staff, along with "Inside the Rhinos" Segments bring fans closer to the team than before.

News, notes and information about the A-League, Major League Soccer and the International game will be highlighted as well as local youth soccer, club teams and high school and college news.

For kids of all ages it's a must see every Saturday at 12:00 noon and midnight on WB-16.

Thank you!

...over. It takes an entire community to make a project like this a reality, including the support of our fans and sponsors. By patronizing the companies that support Rhinos' soccer in Rochester, fans can help solidify the future of the team and the new stadium in this community. We look forward to another exciting season and thank all of our sponsors for their generous support. We hope that the Rhinos' winning tradition translates into similar success for all of our corporate partners!

PaeTec Park

By Eric Trendel

PaeTec Park, Rochester's 17,500 seat, multi-purpose outdoor stadium, will begin construction in the spring/summer of 2003 on the west side of the City of Rochester where the Rochester Raging Rhinos professional soccer team is expected to begin play for the 2004 season.

PaeTec Park's Phase I construction cost is estimated at $24.5 million, which includes seating for 13,000 permanent seats, and additional bleacher seating for 4,500 fans. The stadium will feature 20 corporate suites with press facilities, surface parking and multiple concession areas for food and beverages.

Phase I of the stadium will include a $15 million grant from the State of New York (which was committed in 2000) and a private investment of over $9.5 million from the Rhinos in the form of commercial financing, a food concessionaire financial commitment, cash contribution from the Rhinos team, and development and land acquisition costs.

"PaeTec Park will be a magnificent addition not only to the soccer community, but the city of Rochester and its surrounding areas," said Rhinos President Frank DuRoss. "It will provide a major league atmosphere for Rhinos soccer and Rattlers lacrosse games. It will also create an intimate setting for other events such as concerts, drum and bugle competitions and high school and college sports."

While the construction phase of the stadium approaches, the behind-the-scenes opportunities continue to grow. The naming rights of the stadium have been agreed upon with a local communications company - PaeTec Communications - and most of the luxury suites have been committed to by local businesses.

The Rhinos have also been seeking potential users for the stadium on a local and national level. In addition to the Rhinos, PaeTec Park will also be the home of the Rochester Rattlers of Major League Lacrosse and host events such as Buffalo Bills controlled scrimmages, men's and women's high school and collegiate soccer, lacrosse and field hockey, women's professional soccer and high school and collegiate football. Drum and bugle competitions, community events, concerts, youth sporting events and outdoor shows will also be scheduled into the stadium.

The stadium is designed by HOK Sports Facility Group in Kansas City, Missouri. HOK has worked with 29 of the 32 National Football League franchises and 22 of the 28 Major League Baseball teams. Clients of HOK include numerous professional and collegiate soccer, basketball, hockey and rugby teams. HOK has recently designed soccer stadiums in Australia and New Zealand.
